

Six Most Reported Health Conditions for Elementary School Students (Data from SC Annual School Nursing Surveys)

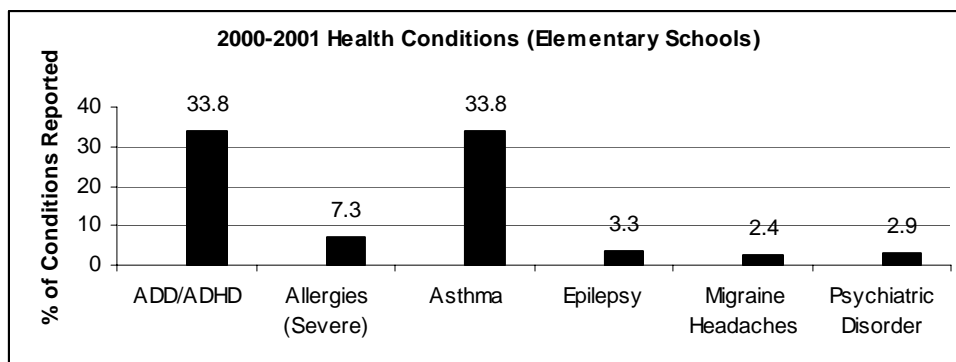

Over the past 5 years, asthma and attention deficit disorder / attention deficit disorder with hyperactivity have consistently accounted for approximately 65% of reported health conditions for elementary school students. Severe allergies, epilepsy, psychiatric disorders, and migraine headaches round out the top six. The graphs below show the percentage for each of the six most reported health conditions. The percentages refer to a percentage of the total of all health conditions reported for elementary school students for the school year indicated.

Survey responses received from 41 of 85 school districts.

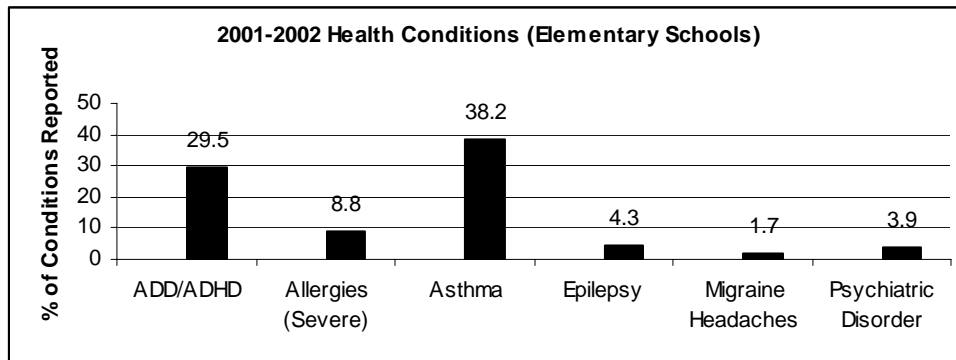

Survey responses received from 45 of 85 school districts.

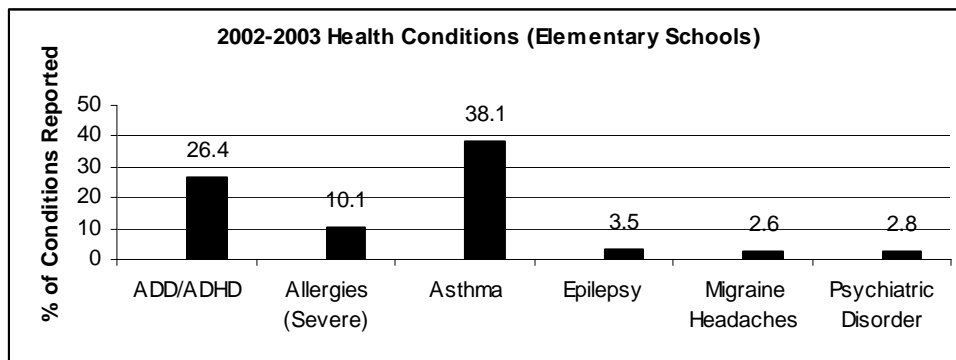

Survey responses received from 51 of 85 school districts.

Six Most Reported Health Conditions for Elementary School Students (cont'd)

(Data from SC Annual School Nursing Surveys)

Survey responses received from 12 of 85 school districts.

Survey responses received from 36 of 85 school districts.